[Docket No. 910364-1196]
[RIN: 0651-AA47]
Amendment to Interrogatory Practices

Agency: Patent and Trademark Office, Commerce.
Action: Final Rule.
Summary: The Patent and Trademark Office (PTO) is amending § 2.120(d)(1) of the rules of practice in trademark cases, which limits the total number of interrogatories that may be served by one party upon another in a trademark interference, concurrent use, opposition, or cancellation proceeding. The amendment shifts, from the responding party to the inquiring party, the burden of filing a motion to determine whether an assertion of an excessive number of interrogatories is well taken; and clarifies the paragraph.
Effective Date: Nov. 12, 1991. The amendment shall be applicable to all inter partes proceedings pending before the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board on or after the effective date.
For Further Information Contact: Janet E. Rice by telephone at (703) 308-9300 or by mail marked to her attention and addressed to Box 5, Trademark Trial and Appeal Board, Commissioner of Patents and Trademarks, Washington, D.C. 20231.
Supplementary Information: In a notice of proposed rulemaking published in the Federal Register on March 7, 1989, at 54 FR 9514, and in the Patent and Trademark Office Official Gazette of March 28, 1989, at 1100 TMOG 137, the PTO proposed amendments to a number of the rules of practice in trademark cases. One of the proposed amendments pertained to § 2.120(d), which then consisted of a single paragraph relating to document production. It was proposed that the section be amended to include a new paragraph (designated "(1)" limiting the number of interrogatories that might be served by one party upon another in a trademark interference, concurrent use, opposition, or cancellation proceeding.

In response to the notice of proposed rulemaking the PTO received numerous written comments pertaining to proposed § 2.120(d)(1). One individual commented that a party served with excessive interrogatories might make its own count of the questions, answer as many as were allowed under the proposed rule, and not answer the remainder on the ground that supernumerary questions were not authorized. To remedy this problem, the individual suggested that if the proposed rule were adopted, it might be advisable to add "a provision prescribing that relief for an excessive number of interrogatories is a protective order rather than an incomplete response to the interrogatories."

This suggestion, among others, was adopted in the final rule notice published in the Federal Register on Aug. 22, 1989, at 54 FR 34886, and in the Patent and Trademark Office Official Gazette of Sept. 12, 1989, at 1106 TMOG 26. Thus, final § 2.120(d)(1) included, as its last sentence, the following provision: "If a party upon which interrogatories have been served believes that the number of interrogatories served exceeds the limitation specified in this paragraph, and is not willing to waive this basis for objection, the party shall, within the time for (and instead of) serving answers and objections to the interrogatories, file a motion for a protective order, accompanied by a copy of the interrogatories which together are said to exceed the limitation."

In addition, the final rule notice indicated that the PTO would monitor the impact of § 2.120(d)(1) carefully and further amend the rule if necessary.

The effective date of the rule amendments specified in the final rule notice was Nov. 16, 1989. Since that time, many attorneys have expressed the opinion, in public meetings relating to trademarks, that it is unfair for a party served with excessive interrogatories to have the burden of filing a motion for a protective order. These attorneys have suggested that the better practice would be to allow the responding party simply to object to the interrogatories on the ground of their excessive number, and leave the propounding party with the burden of filing a motion to compel, if it believes that the objection is not well taken.

Accordingly, in a notice of proposed rulemaking published in the Federal Register on April 15, 1991, at 56 FR 15059, and in the Patent and Trademark Office Official Gazette of May 21, 1991, at 1126 TMOG 40, § 2.120(d)(1) was proposed to be revised to substitute a motion to compel for the motion for a protective order.

Written comments were submitted by one firm and ten individuals, three of whom stated their complete approval of the proposed amendment. In addition, the relevant committee of one organization, and the relevant subcommittee of another organization, submitted letters expressing their complete approval of the proposed amendment.

Discussion of Specific Section Being Changed:

In this discussion, "Trademark Trial and Appeal Board" is abbreviated as "Board."

Section 2.120(d)(1) now provides that the total number of written interrogatories which a party may serve upon another party pursuant to Rule 33 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, in a proceeding, shall not exceed seventy-five, counting subparts, except that the Board, in its discretion, may allow additional interrogatories upon motion therefor showing good cause, or upon stipulation of the parties. A motion for leave to serve additional interrogatories must be accompanied by a copy of the interrogatories, if any, which have already been served by the moving party, and by a copy of the interrogatories proposed to be served. If a party upon which interrogatories have been served believes that the number of interrogatories served exceeds the limitation specified in the paragraph, and is not willing to waive this basis for objection, the party shall, within the time for (and instead of) serving answers and objections to the interrogatories, file a motion for a protective order, accompanied by a copy of the interrogatories which together are said to exceed the limitation.

The paragraph is being revised to provide instead that if a party upon which interrogatories have been served believes that the number of interrogatories served exceeds the limitation specified in the paragraph, and is not willing to waive this basis for objection, the party shall, within the time for (and instead of) serving answers and specific objections to the interrogatories, serve a general objection on the ground of their excessive number.

The paragraph is being further revised to add a requirement that if a party serving the interrogatories, in turn, files a motion to compel discovery, the motion must be accompanied by a copy of the set(s) of interrogatories which together are said to exceed the limitation, and must otherwise comply with the requirements of paragraph (e) of the section. Paragraph (e) governs motions to compel discovery in inter partes proceedings before the Board, and requires, inter alia, that a motion to compel be supported by a written statement from the moving party that such party or its attorney has made a good faith effort, by conference or correspondence, to resolve with the other party or the attorney therefor the issues presented in the motion and has been unable to reach agreement.

The final paragraph includes one revision that was not included in the proposed paragraph. The present paragraph provides, in part, that "A motion for leave to serve additional interrogatories must be accompanied by a copy of the interrogatories, if any, which have already been served by the moving party, and by a copy of the interrogatories proposed to be served" (emphasis added). Thus, the paragraph clearly contemplates, but does not explicitly state, that a motion for leave to serve additional interrogatories must be filed prior to the service of the additional interrogatories. As the result of a written comment filed in response to the notice of proposed rulemaking (see "Response to Comments on the Rule"), and in order to further clarify the paragraph, the foregoing sentence is being revised to read, "A motion for leave to serve additional interrogatories must be filed and granted prior to the service of the proposed additional interrogatories; and must be accompanied by a copy of the interrogatories, if any, which have already been served by the moving party, and by a copy of the interrogatories proposed to be served" (emphasis added).

Response to Comments on the Rule

Comment: Three individuals and the firm objected to the proposed amendment of § 2.120(d)(1).

Two of these individuals asserted their belief that the proposed rule would provide responding parties with a vehicle for abuse and delay. In particular, one of the individuals commented that under the proposed rule, a party served with interrogatories believed to be excessive would be able to assert a general objection thereto, thus delaying its responses to the interrogatories until the propounding party made its required attempt to resolve the matter in good faith; that a party asserting a general objection based on excessive number would not only get to shift the burden of going forward to the propounding party, but also would be able, as a matter of course, to engage in dilatory conduct; and that the party which "wishes to deviate from the norm (i.e., to object to responding to the interrogatories) should be the party to undertake the burden." In the same vein, the second individual asserted that under the proposed rule, a responding party served with interrogatories even remotely close to 75 would merely object to them on the basis of their number; that the objection would cost the responding party nothing and result in none of the interrogatories being answered; that the responding party could delay making its objection until the last day of the 30- or 45-day period for serving a response to the interrogatories; and that if a motion to compel was filed, the propounding party would have to bear the cost thereof, and there would be further delay while the Board considered the motion.

The firm commented that the proposed rule "would almost assuredly result in the need to seek the intervention of the Board in close cases or in cases where insufficient time remains for serving further interrogatories because of the close of discovery." The firm expressed its belief that the proposed rule would result in delay, "avoidable encroachments upon the Board's attention and time, additional expense to the parties and the USPTO and the introduction of further uncertainties relating to the timing of testimony periods. . ."

The third individual commented that the proposed rule seems to contemplate repetitive motions to compel. Specifically, the individual expressed his belief that a motion to compel filed in response to a blanket objection based on excessive number "would seem to require an order either (1) restricting the number of interrogatories or (2) requiring answers and objections to be served;" and that to the extent that specific objections, or insufficient answers, were then served, there might be need for a further motion to compel. This individual suggested that a party served with an excessive number of interrogatories should be required to serve answers or specific objections to the first 75 of them, but should be permitted to assert a blanket objection, on the basis of excessive number, to the remainder.

Response: while there is a possibility that the proposed rule may be used by responding parties as a vehicle for abuse and delay, the present rule provides a similar vehicle for propounding parties. That is, if a propounding party serves an excessive number of interrogatories, the responding party must either serve answers and specific objections, even though the interrogatories are excessive in number, or be put to the trouble and expense of filing a motion for a protective order. In essence, both the present rule, and the proposed rule, require the filing of a motion to determine whether an assertion of an excessive number of interrogatories is well taken; the two rules differ in that the present rule places the burden of filing the motion on the responding party, while the proposed rule would place that burden on the propounding party. In addition, the proposed rule does involve some extra delay, since it provides for an intervening blanket objection on the ground of excessive number prior to the filing of the motion to determine whether the assertion of excessive number is well taken. Nevertheless, it appears that the fairer, and preferable, practice is that embodied in the proposed rule. Moreover, a propounding party may avoid the problems envisioned in the comments by fashioning its interrogatories in such a manner that they clearly do not exceed the numerical limitation of § 2.120(d)(1).

It is true that, under the proposed rule, two motions to compel may be necessary. However, two motions may also be necessary under the present rule, namely, the motion for a protective order, and, after that motion has been determined and answers and specific objections have eventually been served (either to the original interrogatories, if the Board finds that they are not excessive, or to reformulated interrogatories not exceeding the limitation), a motion to compel, if the propounding party is dissatisfied with the answers and/or specific objections. Again, the essential difference between the two rules is that under the present rule, the burden of filing the initial motion lies with the responding party, while under the proposed rule, that burden would lie with the propounding party.

The suggestion that a responding party, served with what it believes to be an excessive number of interrogatories, be required to serve answers or specific objections to the first 75 of them, but be permitted to assert a blanket objection, on the basis of excessive number, to the remainder, has not been adopted. Such an approach would simply open up a new area for dispute, that is, a dispute as to whether the responding party has, in fact, answered the first 75 (rather than only the first 74, or whatever). Further, this type of approach might encourage propounding parties to routinely serve an excessive number of interrogatories, in the belief that the responding party may answer all of them, and at least will answer the first 75. Finally, it is believed that the purposes of discovery are better served if a party which has propounded excessive interrogatories is allowed an opportunity to serve reformulated interrogatories not exceeding the limitation, so that the propounding party may, in effect, decide which of the interrogatories, within the numerical limitation, it most wants to have answered.

Comment: One individual expressed approval of the proposed amendment to the rule but suggested a further amendment. The individual commented that the practice under the current rule is that if a party serves more than 75 interrogatories, and the responding party files a motion for a protective order, the propounding party "no longer is permitted to file a motion for leave to file more than 75 interrogatories." The individual suggested that the rule be further amended to explicitly so provide, in order to discourage propounding parties which have served assertedly excessive interrogatories from coupling their motion to compel with a motion for leave to serve additional interrogatories.

Response: The present rule provides, in part, that a motion for leave to serve additional interrogatories must be accompanied by a copy of the interrogatories, if any, which have already been served by the moving party, and by a copy of the interrogatories proposed to be served. It is clear therefrom that a motion for leave to serve additional interrogatories is to be filed prior to service of the additional interrogatories, not after the fact, and the Board has so held in a number of cases, declining to entertain such a motion when the motion is filed in response to a motion for a protective order. See Chicago Corp. v. North American Chicago Corp., 16 USPQ2d 1479 (TTAB 1990); Baron Phillippe De Rothschild S.A. v. S. Rothschild & Co. Inc., 16 USPQ2d 1466 (TTAB 1990); Towers, Perrin, Forster & Crosby Inc. v. Circle Consulting Group Inc., 16 USPQ2d 1398 (TTAB 1990); and Brawn of California Inc. v. Bonnie Sportswear Ltd., 15 USPQ2d 1572 (TTAB 1990).

However, in order to further clarify the rule, the suggestion has been adopted to the extent that the portion of the paragraph which presently reads, "A motion for leave to serve additional interrogatories must be accompanied by a copy of the interrogatories, if any, which have already been served by the moving party, and by a copy of the interrogatories proposed to be served.", is being revised to read, "A motion for leave to serve additional interrogatories must be filed and granted prior to the service of the proposed additional interrogatories, if any, which have already been served by the moving party, and by a copy of the interrogatories proposed to be served."

Comment: One individual expressed approval of the proposed rule. However, the individual commented that there might be a problem in those cases where a blanket objection on the basis of excessive number is not asserted until after the discovery period has closed; that in those cases, if the propounding party, in response to the objection, voluntarily serves revised interrogatories (rather than filing a motion to compel), the responding party may object to them as untimely, with the result that a motion to compel may be filed. The individual suggested that "to avoid this result, it may be helpful if there is discussion, but not necessarily within the rule, explaining that the service of revised interrogatories, within the scope of the first set, is acceptable."

Response: When a party which has not previously used up its allotted 75 interrogatories serves a set of interrogatories which are excessive in number, and the responding party, in turn, raises the issue of their excessiveness in the manner prescribed in § 2.120(d)(1), it is the practice of the Board to allow the propounding party an opportunity to serve a revised set of interrogatories not exceeding the numerical limitation. See Pyttronic Industries Inc. v. Terk Technologies Corp., 16 USPQ2d 2055 (TTAB 1990); Kellogg Co. v. Nugget Distributors' Cooperative of America Inc., 16 USPQ2d 1468 (TTAB 1990); Baron Phillippe De Rothschild, supra; Towers, Perrin, supra; and Brawn of California, supra. This is so even if the discovery period has closed, since the revised set of interrogatories serves as a substitute for the excessive (but timely) set. However, if the revised set of interrogatories is not served until after the close of the discovery period, the scope of the interrogatories included therin may not exceed that of the original interrogatories, that is, the revised set of interrogatories may not request information not sought in the original interrogatories. See Kellogg Co., supra. Litigants before the Board are strongly encouraged to follow a similar practice voluntarily, without resort to the Board.

The suggestion of the individual has been adopted to the extent that the preceding paragraph explaining the practice of the Board has been included in this final rule notice.

Comment: Two individuals expressed their general approval of the proposed rule, but suggested further modifications thereof. Each of these individuals indicated a preference for the proposed rule, even if not further modified, over the present rule.

One of the individuals stated that a 30-day period for a responding party to serve a blanket objection on the basis of excessive number is too long; that it is a simple objection to write, requiring no supporting statement, let alone argument; and that the proposed 30-day period would thus needlessly delay discovery, and "might impede or prejudice the inquiring party's discovery if the objection were made near the end of the discovery period." The individual suggested that the proposed rule be modified to require that any objection to interrogatories on the basis of excessive number be served within 15 days of the date of service of the interrogatories.

The second individual suggested that a responding party objecting on the basis of an excessive number of interrogatories be required to include in its objection a brief statement explaining how it believes the total number of interrogatories exceeds 75, if the numbered interrogatories and identified parts and subparts do not exceed 75. Then the propounding party should be required, if it files a motion to compel, to explain how its interrogatories are within the limits of the rule. The rule should also provide that the party objecting to the number of interrogatories may, but need not, respond to the motion to compel. The individual noted that if this suggestion were adopted, a response to the motion to compel would be unnecessary because the objection and the motion to compel would present the total picture for the Board's consideration.

Response: The PTO does not believe that the suggested modifications are necessary at this time. However, the PTO will continue to monitor the impact of § 2.120(d)(1) carefully, and will propose further amendments if circumstances warrant.

Other Considerations

The rule change will not have a significant impact on the quality of the human environment or the conservation of energy resources.

The rule change is in conformity with the requirements of the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. 601 et. seq.), Executive Orders 12291 and 12612, and the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980, 44 U.S.C. 3501 et. seq.

The General Counsel of the Department of Commerce has certified to the Chief Counsel for Advocacy, Small Business Administration, that the rule change will not have a significant adverse economic impact on a substantial number of small entities (Regulatory Flexibility Act, 5 U.S.C. 605(b)). The rule change includes no additional or increased fees Substantive rights to use trademarks are not adversely affected.

The Patent and Trademark Office has determined that this rule change is not a major rule under Executive Order 12291. The annual effect on the economy will be less than $100 million. There will be no major increase in costs or prices for consumers; individual industries; Federal, state or local government agencies; or geographic regions. There will be no significant adverse effects on competition, employment, investment, productivity, or innovation, or on the ability of United States-based enterprises to compete with foreign-based enterprises in domestic or export markets.

The Office has also determined that this rule change has no Federalism implications affecting the relationship between the National Government and the States as outlined in Executive Order 12612.

The rule change will not impose any additional burden under the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980, 44 U.S.C. 3501 et. seq.

Reference Collections of U.S. Patents Available for Public Use in Patent Depository Libraries

The following libraries, designated as Patent Depository Libraries (PDLs), receive current issues of U.S. Patents and maintain collections of earlier-issued patents. The scope of these collections varies from library to libary, ranging from patents of only recent years to all or most of the patents issued since 1790.

These patent collections, which are organized in patent number sequence, are available for use by the public free of charge. Each of the PDLs, in addition, offers supplemental reference publications of the U.S. Patent Classification System, including the Manual of Classification, Index to the U.S. Patent Classification, Classification Definitions, and provides technical staff assistance in their use to aid the public, in gaining effctive access to information contained in patents. CASSIS (Classification And Search Support Information System); which provides direct, on-line access to Patent and Trademark Office data, is available at all PDLs. Facilities for making paper copies of patents from either microfilm or paper collections are generally provided for a fee.

Since there are variations in the scope of patent collections among the PDLs and in their hours of service to the public, anyone contemplating use of the patents at a particular library is urged to contact that library, in advance, about its collection and hours in order to avert possible inconvenience.

SECTION 1.—INTERNATIONAL CLASSIFICATION

The short titles associated below with the international class numbers are terms designed merely for quick identification and are not an official part of the international classification. The full names of international classes are given in section 6.1 of the trademark rules of practice.

The designation "U.S. Cl." appearing in this section refers to the U.S. class in effect prior to Sep. 1, 1973 rather than the international class which applies to applications filed on or after that date. For adoption of international classification see notice in the OFFICIAL GAZETTE of Jun. 26, 1973 (911 O.G. TM 210).

SECTION 2.—INTERNATIONAL CLASSIFICATION

The short titles associated below with the international class numbers are terms designed merely for quick identification and are not an official part of the international classification. The full names of international classes are given in section 6.1 of the trademark rules of practice.

The designation "U.S. Cl." appearing in this section refers to the U.S. class in effect prior to Sep. 1, 1973 rather than the international class which applies to applications filed on or after that date. For adoption of international classification see notice in the OFFICIAL GAZETTE of Jun. 26, 1973 (911 O.G. TM 210).

SECTION 1.—INTERNATIONAL CLASSIFICATION

The short titles associated below with the international class numbers are terms designed merely for quick identification and are not an official part of the international classification. The full names of international classes are given in section 6.1 of the trademark rules of practice.

The designation "U.S. Cl." appearing in this section refers to the U.S. class in effect prior to Sep. 1, 1973 rather than the international class which applies to applications filed on or after that date. For adoption of international classification see notice in the OFFICIAL GAZETTE of Jun. 26, 1973 (911 O.G. TM 210).

Reference Collections of U.S. Patents Available for Public Use in Patent Depository Libraries

The following libraries, designated as Patent Depository Libraries (PDLs), receive current issues of U.S. Patents and maintain collections of earlier-issued patents. The scope of these collections varies from library to library, ranging from patents of only recent years to all or most of the patents issued since 1790.

These patent collections, which are organized in patent number sequence, are available for use by the public free of charge. Each of the PDLs, in addition, offers supplemental reference publications of the U.S. Patent Classification System, including the Manual of Classification, Index to the U.S. Patent Classification, Classification Definitions, and provides technical staff assistance in their use to aid the public, in gaining effctive access to information contained in patents. CASSIS (Classification And Search Support Information System); which provides direct, on-line access to Patent and Trademark Office data, is available at all PDLs. Facilities for making paper copies of patents from either microfilm or paper collections are generally provided for a fee.

1`Since there are variations in the scope of patent collections among the PDLs and in their hours of service to the public, anyone contemplating use of the patents at a particular library is urged to contact that library, in advance, about its collection and hours in order to avert possible inconvenience.

SECTION 1.—INTERNATIONAL CLASSIFICATION

The short titles associated below with the international class numbers are terms designed merely for quick identification and are not an official part of the international classification. The full names of international classes are given in section 6.1 of the trademark rules of practice.

The designation "U.S. Cl." appearing in this section refers to the U.S. class in effect prior to Sep. 1, 1973 rather than the international class which applies to applications filed on or after that date. For adoption of international classification see notice in the OFFICIAL GAZETTE of Jun. 26, 1973 (911 O.G. TM 210).

SECTION 2.—INTERNATIONAL CLASSIFICATION

The short titles associated below with the international class numbers are terms designed merely for quick identification and are not an official part of the international classification. The full names of international classes are given in section 6.1 of the trademark rules of practice.

The designation "U.S. Cl." appearing in this section refers to the U.S. class in effect prior to Sep. 1, 1973 rather than the international class which applies to applications filed on or after that date. For adoption of international classification see notice in the OFFICIAL GAZETTE of Jun. 26, 1973 (911 O.G. TM 210).

Reference Collections of U.S. Patents Available for Public Use in Patent Depository Libraries

The following libraries, designated as Patent Depository Libraries (PDLs), receive current issues of U.S. Patents and maintain collections of earlier-issued patents. The scope of these collections varies from library to library, ranging from patents of only recent years to all or most of the patents issued since 1790.

These patent collections, which are organized in patent number sequence, are available for use by the public free of charge. Each of the PDLs, in addition, offers supplemental reference publications of the U.S. Patent Classification System, including the Manual of Classification, Index to the U.S. Patent Classification, Classification Definitions, and provides technical staff assistance in their use to aid the public, in gaining effctive access to information contained in patents. CASSIS (Classification And Search Support Information System); which provides direct, on-line access to Patent and Trademark Office data, is available at all PDLs. Facilities for making paper copies of patents from either microfilm or paper collections are generally provided for a fee.

Since there are variations in the scope of patent collections among the PDLs and in their hours of service to the public, anyone contemplating use of the patents at a particular library is urged to contact that library, in advance, about its collection and hours in order to avert possible inconvenience.
